THE JOY OF PRESENTING A MAGIC LANTERN SHOW FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL CHILDREN

By Bob Askren

I have a daughter who teaches first grade. A school program called “Cultural Arts Day” was fast approaching with the need for presenters, and daughter told the Principal that her father has these wonderful things called magic lanterns; the Principal says, “Ask him,” and I was volunteered to present at Midway Heights Elementary in Columbia, Missouri.

Somewhere in our Gazette publications I’m sure I read a piece by Bob Bishop or Joe Koch which said in essence, don’t give magic lantern shows to little kids. If I misread or dreamed the above, my apologies to Bob and Joe. However, my experience with these children was great fun. I will also mention another bit of info gleaned from the Gazette (which I did not heed) . . . don’t rely on others about the size of screens, stands, etc . . . take your own.

In preparing for the show I found it necessary to use two lanterns, one for my circle slide of “Red Riding Hood” and the other for wood frame slip slides and the many other size slides for which I had made adapters to fit the lantern. I also upgraded the lighting, dimmer, and transformer for cooling fans; and also the new dichroic coated heat absorbing glass for both lanterns. All of this is due to the wonderful information in Jack Judson’s book “A Guide to Restoration and Preservation of Magic Lanterns.” Thanks Jack.

I did have enough smarts to question what subject matter would be appropriate. It was decided to stay clear of religion, violence, racial issues, and temperance (alcohol). This cut out quite a few slides such as “Swanee

THE PRESIDENT’S VIEW
By Bob Hall

Well we made it into the year 2000. Other than all the “hype” about why we DIDN’T have Y2K problems, it looks much like 1999 to me. Oh, yes, it does seem strange to write ‘00 instead of ‘99 when writing dates, but I am adjusting to it. I found another problem when I read the following headline in our local newspaper, “The Class of ’08 Has Different Requirements.” I immediately thought about students from 1908, but the article was about students who will graduate in 2008. Also, when we say “It is from the turn of the century,” now we have to state which century, 19th or 20th.

Be that as it may, the interesting thing to me is the magic lantern has moved into yet another century. With Kircher (or a contemporary) developing and using the magic lantern, this makes five different centuries in which the magic lantern has been used. Quite a life span for a piece of technology, don’t you think?

The magic lantern’s introduction into the 21st century will be enhanced by the great convention we will be having in Hollywood, California, June 22 through 25 this year. Since I’m writing this in late January, I am assuming you have all received your convention materials by now, have returned your registration, and have made your reservations. You don’t want to miss the first convention of the Magic Lantern Society of the United States and Canada in the 21st century. You will have a great time meeting new people, meeting old friends, seeing great shows, learning scads of things, and be sure to empty your piggy bank and bring the contents with you for those once-in-a-lifetime buys you will make at the auction and sale tables. I’m looking forward to the convention. Hope to see you there. Horray Magic Lantern Society of the United States and Canada 2000!

NEW BOOK AND WEB SITE AVAILABLE FOR MAGIC LANTERN COLLECTORS
From Margaret and Nancy Bergh

Dear Ms. Bergh:
You may recall that we corresponded back in 1995 when I was referred to you by Terry Horton of The American Magic Lantern Theater. At that time, I was conducting research for my book on audiovisual adaptations, including magic lantern versions, of Charles Dicken’s A Christmas Carol.

My book has just come out and I was wondering if you could please give it a mention in the next issue of the American Magic Lantern Journal; I would also be grateful for anything you can do to generally spread the word in the magic lantern community. (You and the journal (ed. Note – Gazette) are in the book’s acknowledgments.)

The book contains much that will be of interest to magic lantern collectors and enthusiasts including a discussion of the magic lantern’s role in paving the way for movies. It also includes fifteen magic lantern images including some from an 1800 life model version (provided by Ann Hecht in England) and others from Terry’s Beale set ca 1908. In fact, as you see on the enclosed postcard, one of Terry’s Beale images is on the book’s cover.

Also, I have set up a web site for the book which includes several magic lantern images: www.dickenschristmascarol.com. In addition to showing slides from the Hecht and Horton collections, it includes a picture of Terry with his (sic)trual projector and several slides from the collection of Hans Dankleff-Hansen in Germany. I am sure that your readers will be interested in the web site.

The book also contains much info on early cinema including first-hand accounts of several extremely rare silent “Carols” starting as early as 1901. In fact, two lost versions of the “Carol” turned up during the course of my research.

Thanks very much for your attention. For your convenience, I have enclosed a stamped envelope; please let me know what you think.

Sincerely,
Fred Guida

GRAND MAGIC LANTERN ENTERTAINMENT

In the final selection of slides for this show another problem arose. The length of the show was changed several times and ended up being 25 minutes with five minutes between each of three presentations. Because one presenter became ill, I had an extra class in one of the shows which made the following line up: a combined group of 18 kindergartners and 20 fourth graders, next a class of 26 fifth graders, and last a class of 29 first graders. Of all the slides shown, "Red Riding Hood" was the only scripted selection. I also used two slip slides with the Pinocchio nose, one with a dog on the end, each with an on the spot story about what happens to your nose when you lie. A selection of slides showing children at play and various activities of years gone by, including the use of magic lanterns by children, was also included.

It was important for Fran and I to help these children understand that there was a time when there were no televisions, movies, computers, or any other electronic devices for entertainment, and that is what made the magic lantern so special.

An added ingredient that helped make the show successful was the copies made of an old magic lantern adversing poster with the name of the school and show dates inserted. These posters were displayed throughout the school. Tickets were given to the students for admittance to the show and were given back to them for a souvenir.

The payoff for all this work and worry was the day I received "thank you" letters from a number of students. Here are a few of the letters I received. The first three are written by first graders using phonetic spelling, the last two by a fourth and fifth grader.

The fourth lecture of the current series was delivered on Tuesday evening in the Prince of Wales Assembly Rooms by Thomas Marsh Esq., on America and the War. The attendance proved both numerous and influential, Francis Bertram Esq., Coie (President of the Association), took the chair and opened the proceedings by calling on the Rev. E. Heale to offer prayer. After this had been done, Mr. Marsh informed his auditory (sic) before commencing his lecture that the subject of his discourse that evening was to have been "Music" according to the announcement, but being unable to obtain the necessary voices for illustration, he had on the recommendation of the committee collated facts relating to "America and the present war," which he thought might prove interesting, especially as he was enabled to exemplify a portion of the lecture by means of many characteristic views, with the aid of the Lime Light Apparatus, under the management of Messrs. Vonberg and Carrel.

Mr. Marsh began by commenting on the importance of that event in history, when the New World was given to the Old, and interest and anxiety felt by all nations of Europe, about the infant Republic of America; how they watched its growth and wondered at its development, desiring to know what it was capable of achieving with such vast resources at its command; and now they were asking whether Republicanism in this case was a success or otherwise? The Lecturer next gave a brief sketch of the Civil Constitution of the United States in 1754, when France and Great Britain were embroiled in war, and the commercial prosperity of the latter was exciting the jealousy of every continental power; the revisions and amendments that Constitution underwent until it received its final ratification in 1798. Next the original thirteen colonies throwing off their allegiance to Great Britain, and the first great sectional struggle under the new Constitution in 1821 between the slaveholding and non-slaveholding States, concerning the admission of Missouri as a Slave State. Here Mr. Marsh enumerated the States on either side, showing Oregon to have been constituted the thirty-third State of the Union, one year after whose admission that immense Confederation was rent asunder by the people of the seven seceding States afterwards joined by the other Southern States. The Lecturer then said he would postpone consideration of the war until he had spoken of the manners and customs of the Americans, more particularly of those among whom the great enemy of peace had stirred up the present strife, and alluded to the fact that every country of Europe had yielded some of its inhabitants to the United States.

Boston, the capital of Massachusetts, next came under review, and this was the first of a series of twelve dissolving views, which for accuracy could not be excelled, having been taken from the best photographs; giving great interest to their respective subjects as the lecturer disposed of them in their order. Many interesting historical associations connected with these scenes were adverted to by Mr. Marsh as they were presented before his auditory, and he also related an amusing story by Diedrick Knickerbocker, accounting for the name Anthony's Nose having been given to some rocks in the Hudson by old Peter Stuyvesant.

After this series of views, the Lecturer passed on to the consideration of the present American War, contrasting the chief facts that have been published on both sides of the question at issue between the Northern and Southern States, commenting in the unrighteousness of the belligerents by attributing infatuation to the South and duplicity to the North, whereby they had provoked an overruling Providence to strike through the social and political fabric together, that liberty may be restored to the captive and that the oppressed may go free; denouncing Mr. A. H. Stephens' theory of government as a system based on a lie rather than a great physical and moral truth, whence a myth had been generated that was ruining his cause; and stating his (the lecturer's) belief that the hitherto united States would henceforth be disunited—that their vast territories, of which they were so fond of boasting, will shrink ere long to their due proportions.

A second series of 12 views on the St. Lawrence was next exhibited, which from their picturesque scenery and graphic descriptions, afforded great pleasure to the company. During the delivery of his lecture, which occupied above two houses, Mr. Marsh was repeatedly applauded. After prayer had been offered, and a blessing asked, the audience separated.

ABOUT SNOWFLAKE BENTLEY

By Barbara Fleisher Zucker

The yesteryear feel of the cover, a man with a view camera, caught my attention. I leafed through it quickly and then reread it slowly. The informative text and skillfully executed, hand-colored woodcut illustrations tell the story of a boy who was determined to capture the unique beauty of snowflakes. But he did even more. He gave shows for his friends who were seated on the grass while he projected his glass slides onto a sheet draped clothesline. Though the book is unpaginated, you will find the two-page spread of his slide show (lantern projector and glass plates) toward the end of the story.

The book, a biography of the self-taught scientist Wilson Bentley, won the 1999 Caldecott Medal. This annual award goes to the artist of the most distinguished American picture book for children published in the United States during the preceding year. As such, it will be widely available in bookstores and libraries and studied by those interested in children's literature and book illustration.

Snowflake Bentley was written by Jacqueline Briggs Martin, illustrated by Mary Azarian, and published by Houghton Mifflin in 1998. For more on Bentley see American Magazine 99 (1925) 28-31 and National Geographic 43 (1923) 103-112. And check your collections because many colleges and universities bought copies of his photographs and designers have used them for inspiration.
LIFE ON THE ROAD WITH THE AMERICAN MAGIC LANTERN THEATER
By Terry Borton

"Standing Ovation"
Lakeside, OH. This wonderful old Chautauqua community—hundreds of Victorian cottages in a private community on Lake Erie, where kids tool around on their bikes, oldsters wage bitter shuffleboard, and everyone goes to the historic Hoover Auditorium in the evenings for a show, concert, or lecture. The up side of performing here is that you can get a big audience. (We had 500 our first year, and 1,500 our second.) The down side is that if they don’t like you, they get up after ten minutes and leave. (They stayed.)

It’s the kind of place where you can meet people who remember the magic lantern in action.

I met a Mason from southern Ohio who told me that his lodge has a side-by-side wood-and-brass biunial that has been showing the same Masonic ritual slides every week for 100 years.

I met a man who was a minister in Bangladesh in the 20s. He gave religious magic lantern shows, traveling from town to town, staying in each town for about a week, with a show six nights a week. The performances were extremely popular; people came from miles around to attend. He used a calcium light, and both front and rear screen projection—at the same time. The men in the audience sat in front of the screen, the women behind it. The screen itself was the moral divider.

I met a man who as a boy gave lantern shows for unsuspecting friends in a basement theater he had built himself. He especially like ending the show because he had rigged the audience cushions with electric wires. When he finished with a flag-waving finale, he threw the switch. A standing ovation, every time!

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC SLIDE SHOW EXPOSED
By Bob and Sue Hall

Those of you who attended the 1998 Convention in Cleveland may remember our tongue-in-cheek program on prostitution. We put the show together with bits and pieces from a number of slide sets, including a set on White Slavery slides that we purchased at the Connecticut Convention auction.

To research material for our show we had purchased three turn-of-the-century books on white slavery. We later sold these on eBay.

One book was purchased by a woman from Michigan doing her doctoral dissertation on white slavery. She inquired about other related material we might have. We told her about our slides and like most people, she had never heard of such a thing and was most intrigued. She wanted to purchase them but at that time we weren’t selling, but we did send her some photocopies of a few.

Recently we received a letter from her. Here is an excerpt from it plus related information she sent.

“...I was doing some research in Chicago and found the enclosed letter and flier in one of the folders I was looking in. I thought of your slides and thought you would enjoy seeing them. I don’t know if they are related to the slides that you have but I found a number of references to different groups making slides on white slavery (in San Francisco and the Midwest) as a way to raise money for the reform efforts. All of the references come from the first two decades of the 20th century.

J.C. Westenberg was clearly one of the big names in doing slide shows on white slavery. At first he got into it as an effort to clean up San Francisco for the Panama Pacific International Exposition but references to the Expo soon disappear in his stuff and he starts trying to close down the red light district for good.

I found some reviews of his “Expose: The White Slave Traffic” slide show and one of them admits that people came just to see the slides and really didn’t care about the larger reform effort! He gave the speech and showed the slides primarily in churches through the first few months of 1912. Everyone really enjoyed his show.”

My Dear Sir:

We have taken up the matter of securing a representation at the Panama Pacific International Exposition for the Rescue Missions of the World. We feel that we ought to be able to make this one of the greatest features of the Exposition. The World’s Fair at Chicago had on that order in connection with this Exposition, but what we want is a definite representation of all the Rescue Missions of the world in general and the United States in particular.

White Slave Traffic continued

We are planning to take a trip across the Continent, visiting all the Missions and holding special conferences with them and arraning for the co-operation of each in this great movement. We for the co-operation of each in this great movement. We want this to be a real exposition of the power of men and we want this to be a real exposition of the power of the Gospel to save men. We want your co-operation in this matter; we do not want to leave anybody out. The Commissioners of the Exposition will not recognize merely local effort and the only way that this thing can be conducted successfully will be as an International movement. There cannot be several organizations represented under different heads; it must be one great movement in order to gain recognition.

We are depending very much upon the International Society of Rescue Missions and kindred organizations to take this matter up as a general movement, and trust we may have your co-operation.
We are asking that all along the line arrangements be made for a special meeting for all the missions of each city upon a date when we will be there and will arrange for separate organizations all over the Country to unite with a general international organization and make this one gigantic movement.

In our trip across the continent we are paying our expenses by giving a stereopticon expose of the White Slave Traffic, together with the story of the power of the Gospel in the slums of our cities from New York to San Francisco and asking that in each city an appointment or two be made for a union meeting at which we will give our lecture and take up an offering for the expenses of the trip; any surplus will go to the general work.

Believing that you will co-operate with us in this matter, and praying God’s blessing upon you, we are,

Yours for the Master

It is especially adapted for a mixed audience

We will consider it a great privilege if you will give us an opportunity to deliver this lecture in your church for the glory of God and the benefit of the people in your community. Please notify the superintendent at least one month ahead of the date desired. Prompt attention paid to all applications. We do the advertising.

There is nothing said children should not know, but in our judgment it should be told by parents. This is a question for grown folks. We suggest that children under 12 years of age be accompanied by parents.

Gig Harbor, Washington Meeting
By Judie Shape

Hosting the August 15 summer barbecue again were Bob and Sue Hall. Joining them in the rain were Bob Doren, Larry Cederholm, Dorothy and Ron Easterday, Betty and John Potter, Alice and Joe Koch, Sharon Koch, and Judie and Ralph Shape.

Discussion of J.P. Jenks offer of printing the 1907 Sears catalog. Would cost $20.00 each to print. Should we print 20 to be available to sell at the convention? Decided not practicable. Possibly print a couple of pages in the Gazette and ascertain interest of membership to purchase. (ed. Note: More on this in June issue.)

After our usual “hello" hour all 13 had a great barbecue. Because of the inclement weather we were stacked in the kitchen and dining room. Despite rumor to the contrary, Bob did not burn down Gig Harbor; there was just a small amount of smoke drifting over the state.

Had phone call from Bob Bishop expressing his regrets at not being able to join us and wishing all a great day.

Adjournment downstairs to the theatre/museum for meeting and showtime.

News was read of Swiss member Rachel Honegger’s passing in June. Joe submitted a letter to be sent to Gerhard on behalf of the Northwest Group expressing our regrets.

Discussion of December enclosure with the Gazette. Two possibilities. Dick Balzer has given permission to reprint another issue from his collection of The Magic Lantern from 1875. This has been done twice before. Possibly as substitute for December issue of Gazette. Second choice is a reprint of Joe’s booklet Lecture Sermon. Larry will get quotes for printing both. (Late info from Larry: 150 each of the small 40 page (Joe’s book) $228.10 plus tax. The Balzer booklet (150 each) 100 pages = $568.40 plus tax.) Balzer booklet will be More business: Ralph questioned the policy of no pro rating of the dues for the late-in-the-year joining members. Decided to keep policy the same. Send new members back issues of the Gazette for the year.

Auburn, Washington Meeting
By Judie Shape
Another Sunday gathering of enthusiastic magic lantern friends brought a full house to the home of our hosts Joe and Alice Koch on November 7, 1999. In attendance: Larry Cederblom, Bob Doren, Ron and Dorothy Easterday, Betty and John Potter, Harvey Becker, Bob and Sue Hall, Sharon Koch, and Ralph and Judie Shape.

New Business: Short discussion of upcoming convention and nomination of new officers. Will solicit interested runees in the next Gazette. Financial report submitted by Ralph. Society is in good condition. Membership stands at 148 and treasury is near $5,000. Financial report will be included to members in the December mailing. With increased costs for everything from printing to postage will suggest to membership at convention that dues be raised to $25.00 for everyone. Also, to allow dues to be pro-rated, probably quarterly, for new members joining late in the year. This will necessitate a change in by-laws. All agreed to grant Bob Bishop the right to reprint articles on the Djin of the Lantern that he has submitted for publication in the Gazette in past years.

Miscellaneous: Sue has a buyer seeking Catalina Island slides.
Joe read a humorous article on antiques and the antique affliction. Also correspondence from Henry Clark. Larry Cederblom has and will share patterns to “make your own bellows.” List of current e-mail addresses was passed around. To be published in next NW Corner news.
Newspaper article on Joe, the “unofficial historian.”

Elgin Smith has had some health problems. All are concerned.
Larry had printouts of outrageous prices being realized on eBay. Houdini slide, $1,325; Animal Crackers slides, $330; Kewpie slides, $1,027; Mickey Mouse slide, $413.

Meeting dates set for the year 2000:

January 16 at the Shape’s
April 2 at the Hall’s
June Convention in Hollywood, California
August 13 or 29 at the Easterday’s
October 22 at Sharon Koch’s

Lunchtime: All enjoyed casseroles, salads, pies and cakes.

Meeting adjourned at 4:00 p.m.

"Magic lantern enchants modern crowd"
By Gillian Jones
The reference room of the historic North Adams Public Library proved to be the ideal, intimate setting for a show of Magic Lantern Entertainment with a Victorian Stereopticon, presented by David and Sandy Brooke of Williamstown on Wednesday night to a group of about 40 people.

The lantern has a history dating back to the 17th century as an optical curiosity. It was used by traveling showmen for public and private entertainment by the late 18th century. Slides were projected on a screen, with musical accompaniment or spoken text.

The entertainment artform pre-dated early movies with some early animation, through moving slides and dissolving effects that simulate motion. Despite the sophistication of the art, the lantern was used by ministers, missionaries, scientists, schoolmasters, temperance lecturers, and professional entertainers, as well as amateurs such as parents and children.

Although the lantern was popular during the Victorian era, it fell victim to competition from early movies and lost popularity by the 1920s.

Brooke started to collect lantern slides about 25 years ago and is a member of the British and American Magic Lantern Societies. A former director of the Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, Brooke has given shows in many museums and historical societies, using a double lantern dating back to the beginning of the 20th century.

Although Brooke has collected more than 100 slides, he showed a number of "his best slides" at the library. Many of the slides are hand-painted and date back to the late 19th century. Some involve movement, created by a crank, lever, or slipping glass.

Brooke lectured about the slides and made recitations while slides were projected on the screen by his wife Sandy, who operated the American made double lantern. The program also included song slides, which advertised sheet music in silent movie theaters.

The program concluded with a series of comical slides that demonstrated accidents and transformations. The finale, a comical slide called the "Ratcatcher," features a snoozing man, lying in his bed, who accidentally swallows a rat.

Brooke said the atmosphere of the historical library was reminiscent of Magic Lantern entertainment, with a queen-size flat white sheet hung on the wall over a bookcase for the hand-painted slides to be projected upon. As breezes of air circulation in the room moved the sheet, the still images came alive, appearing to move across the rumpled sheet.

In a collaboration between the North Adams Historical Society and the library, the free program is the first of many to come. Attendees commented on the bright colors in the slides and the history involved in the medium.

"He seems to love doing it," said Marcia Gross, director of the library. She said sponsors wanted to bring some history into the lives of area residents by presenting the program.
BITS AND PIECES

1 Apologies from the editors to anyone who received a "postage due" Gazette in December. In the Christmas rush a few went out with insufficient postage. If you did not receive one at all, please contact Ralph Shape for a copy.

2 Thanks to all of you who responded so favorably to the reprint of the 1876 Magic Lantern booklet you received in lieu of the regular January Gazette. It also generated quite a bit of interest in past reprinted issues. One is sold out but a few copies of Volume 1 No. 9 is still available from Ralph Shape for $5.00. Thanks again to Dick Balzar for allowing us to reprint these from his collection.

3 Many of you know by now that Nancy Bergh experienced a heart attack this fall. After treatment and a brief stay in the hospital her prognosis is quite good. She was still recuperating in January with lots of rest and cardiac rehab. She is now spending her time learning to cook low fat, low cholesterol, and low sodium foods, a lot more work, she reports. She now understands the reason for the term "convenience foods."

4 Keystone Slide info from Tom Rall – The Keystone Mast collection is at the University of California, Riverside. Tom has had some e-mail correspondence with the curator and initially was the first person to have inquired about the Keystone production of lantern slides in the curator’s tenure. He says they have about 9,000 slides but they have never been individually cataloged or studied. In more recent correspondence, he’s offered to let Tom post any articles about Keystone slides to their web site and to refer people with questions about Keystone slides to him.

According to Tom and Karl Link there is a book based on the Keystone slides called The World As It Was, fairly expensive, if you can find it.

5 Address Change: Lucille Albright is at a new location – 2909 Woodland Ave. Apt. 716, Des Moines, IA 50312.

6 There is no charge for buy and sell ads. This is a service of the Society to its members.

7 Justin Kelly, an artist and contractor who has come to several meetings of the Northeast Magic Lantern Society, makes decorative window shutters out of lantern slides. His customers select the slides they want from Justin’s collection. Once mounted in the shutter, the slides are projected from the sun by being encased in special glass.

One of Kelly’s shutters was featured in an article on “Grand Funk: Old World elegance wired for sound” in The New York Times Magazine of August 25, 1996. The shutter is in a Greenwich Village musician’s house, the renovation of which was supervised by San Francisco architect, Christopher Andrews.

Comment: The first Queen Elizabeth put this practice into effect under penalty of death. (She put many of her lovers to death so everyone knew she meant it.)

For Sale
As I collect only the children’s colored slides, one set of black & white ‘photo’ slides I came in possession of is of no great interest to me. In addition, it appears to be a set of photos dealing with some American military campaign and I felt that someone in the U.S. may be interested in obtaining these.

The following set of eight slides are black & white and consist of four circles with a picture (what is most likely a photo) in each. Apparently some are missing from the set (starts at photo #5 and ends at #40), obviously 1-4 and 25-28 are missing and possibly any after number 40. I do not know the exact subject matter but the entire series is of some sort of single military assignment. By the dress of the people and the ships and guns it appears to be pre-WWI. It also seems to take place in a tropical location due to the palm trees, etc. It’s most likely an American mission as the American flag can be seen in a few photos. There appears to be another flag, but unable to distinguish its origin.

It is possible that this is a series depicting the “Battle of San Juan Hill” or the sinking of the “Maine” or something similar (perhaps a battle in Cuba or other Central American country). It involves a lot of ships, some sea battles, ships sinking, as well as many old cannons. Also, several photos of military figures (ship captains or head of the military, and possibly government figures).

If anybody is interested in these I could try to photocopy them to show the pictures, but they are very small with a lot of detail. All are 2.3/8” x 6”, black and white, four circles:
- 5-captain
- 6-ship
- 7-ship low in water
- 8-old battleship
- 9-captain
- 10-old battleship
- 11-man in suit
- 12-3 stack ship
- 13-ship construction
- 14-ship & flags
- 15-ship
- 16-ship
- 17-man bow tie
- 18-ship sinks
- 19-ship & smoke
- 20-2 stack ship
- 21-captain
- 22-2 stack ships
- 23-ship explodes
- 24-sinking ship/smoke
- 29-man in suit
- 30-soldiers shoot
- 31-men & old cannon
- 32-men storm fort
- 33-man suit mustache
- 34-men work at old cannon
- 35-battle scene & cannon, American flag
- 36-4 trooper carry across field
- 37-sailors parade American flag
- 38-sea battle & flag
- 29-captain salutes troops
- 40-troops around 2 cannons – battleship in background

Secondly, I now have a number of duplicate children’s slides (about 38 in total) of the hundreds I have. I have enclosed a full description of each but do not feel you have to put these in; just a notice to the fact that they are available should suffice. I can send a copy of the list to interested parties.

I am interested in selling or trading these for other children’s slides of interest to me. Contact Lawrence Spencer, 38 Richardson Dr., Fall River, N.S., B2T 1E7; phone - 902-862-1328, fax – 902-861-2885; lspencer@jackknife.spoon.org
